I recently started a new job where my boss has told me I'll have to work on bank holidays. This was never the case in my old job. Can my employer really make me work on a public holiday, and should I get paid extra if I do?

Unfortunately, when it comes to bank holidays, whether or not staff have to work is up to their employer, and you don't have to be paid more if you do. The situation will vary from job to job and depends on a number of factors, e.g. whether your place of work is open on bank holidays. If you have a contract, this should set out your personal situation.

A contract might say that you will always get bank holidays off, or that you may sometimes be required to work them, or that you will always be required to work them. If your place of work is normally open on a bank holiday you'll probably be asked to work at least some. But if your contract says you get bank holidays off you shouldn't be asked to work.

Your contract might say something like: "In addition to bank and public holidays, your annual entitlement to holidays is X days". This means you get public holidays off in addition to your annual leave entitlement but it might not mean you're entitled to take the specific days off. You may be required to work a bank holiday, in which case you should get another day off instead.

Alternatively, it might say something like: "Your annual holiday entitlement (inclusive of bank and public holidays) is X days" - this means you have to take bank holidays off as part of your annual leave entitlement.

A common misunderstanding around bank holidays is that employers have to pay you extra for working them. This is not the case. Unless your contract says you'll be paid extra you will just be paid your normal amount. Your employer has to follow what's set out in your contract - if they don't, you should raise this with them.

If you don't have a contract, the legal default position is that your employer can tell you when you can or can't take time off. If you'd like to request a bank holiday off, use the normal method for requesting time off.

If you find you need to resolve an issue with your employer, first ask for an informal chat, where you can raise your concerns. If this doesn't get you anywhere, you may need to raise a formal grievance. If you need advice on this, contact South Lakes Citizens Advice.

Dear Friends,

For many of us, this month will herald a never-before-experienced event, the Coronation of a new Monarch. Those born during the long reign of Elizabeth II will have heard the recollections of an earlier generation speaking about 1953. But the past is a different country, and those post-war images seem quaint by today's standards. The final Coronation Service has not been published, and there has been much talk of how it might reflect the United Kingdom of the twenty-first century. However, many of the changes within the service itself, such as the Coronation Oath, require Parliamentary approval, and nothing substantial has reached Parliament at time of publication. The heart of the Coronation Service may remain similar in its scope to earlier coronations. It is not always appreciated that the Coronation Service is primarily a Christian act of worship, full of symbolism.

Before the monarch is crowned, the Bible is given with the words: 'We present you with this Book, the most valuable thing that this world affords. Here is Wisdom; this is the royal law. These are the lively Oracles of God.'

The Bible has profoundly influenced the thoughts and actions of kings and queens. The emergence, under Alfred the Great (a Bible translator himself), of a Common Law tradition consistent with the teachings of the Bible, St. Dunstan's fashioning of an early Coronation oath and Henry I's Charter of Liberties (which influenced Magna Carta) are all examples of the role the Bible has played in the development of the monarchy and of other political institutions in our land. The promise to uphold the Laws of God and to govern people according to law are basic to a constitutional monarchy, but originate in Bible passages such as Deuteronomy chapter 17 verses 14-20 and 1 Samuel chapter 12 verse 14 onwards.

The orb set under the cross is presented, a reminder that the whole world is under the power of Christ our Redeemer. As the sword is given, a prayer is said describing the monarch as a minister of God for the punishment of evildoers and for the protection and encouragement of the virtuous. This is taken directly from St. Paul's description of a ruler in Romans chapter 13.

The King is anointed with holy oil on the palms, the breast and the head, in continuity with the anointing of kings, priests, and prophets in Israel. In the Bible, anointing is what God does through his servants to carry out certain tasks. During the anointing the King removes robes and vesture of power in a gesture of humility before God. The monarch is to be a public example of service, sacrifice and selflessness, a reflection of the humility of Christ, the Servant King.

The Coronation Service, as it has evolved, is designed to be a clear declaration of the Christian basis of society, yet also be welcoming to those of other faiths and, indeed, of none. May it honour Christ and also display genuine respect to our friends of many and varied backgrounds.

Every Blessing, Revd Bryan Kerr
